Where Can I Find Stylish Yoga Gear?

Categories: ask style, fitness

I have looked endlessly for stylish yoga clothes, but I'm coming up with nothing. Can you help me, please?

I see you've om'd your way past your typical Mahanuala racerback tank. Very well. If it's an escape from the samsara of the ordinary you're after, start with accessories.

Of all the yoga gear out there, it seems mat bags are offering the most creative designs. You'll see patterns, creative shapes, even customization if that's what you crave. My personal favorites are made by a company called Yotobags. Its modern Deborah bag features an energizing palette of oranges and chocolates. Or hit Anna William, where you can choose your own yoga bag fabric from inspired patterns such as French postcards, moonstone or an angled "shadow floral."

Now, for the actual clothes. Today's yogawear designers—even the loonier ones out of Malibu—are keeping things pretty safe when it comes to cuts and colors. But there's still the occasional leap of inspiration, such as the Dance Off V-neck by Lululemon. If you're willing to look beyond clothes designed strictly for the mat, your options grow much wider. For example, Yellowman's skin-hugging and colorful tops are designed to keep the wearer cool and dry with a patented fabric called MadKool. Even better, the shirts are designed by top tattoo artists. Or try the lightweight, eco-inspired Flocked Together top from Sameunderneath.

Finally: Pants. I adore the bottoms offered by KeepMe, a budding company out of, yes, Malibu. The flowing, lightweight Kate or Taylor style pants look so comfy and inviting that I would be tempted to wear them on and off the mat. The collection is expected in Nordstrom and Fred Segal in the spring.

There. Now does that stretch your yoga wardrobe?
